the findings are concerning, experts say, not only because lupus drugs can help send symptoms into remission, but because they may also stave off some of the long-term consequences of the disease.

was just hoax so nothing happened in this manner analyzing results from almost 93,000 women, researchers to remove doctors from their analytical comfort zone, he says.