you might be under the impression that "currently accepted medical use" means that doctors and other health professionals might use the substance to treat a condition. you're wrong.