since keynes (1921) knight (1921) we know that uncertainties in economics usually come with no objective statistical probabilities it’s a well known fact in prague that ticket checking is sporadic at best